Lettuce in the frames needs constant attention to give the plants air if this sunny weather continues. In my frames I have had an unusual condition, owing to the warm weather in November and early December, for I find that a good many plants of the Big Boston lettuce are running to bloom instead of heading. I have never seen this before, and it is rather odd that one plant runs to seed while another right

But there is no need in the South for depending on cottonseed hulls for roughage, since we can produce more feed of various sorts than in any other part of the country. Propagating Grapes.

'I have some nice vines of Niagara. Concord and Delaware, and I wish to grow some more of these from cuttings. Please give directions for rooting them in The Times-Dispatch." Make cuttings of this season's shoots. Make them of three joints, cut square under the lowest bud and about an inch above the upper one. Then tie the cuttings in bundles and dig a hole and bury them upside down. This will enable you to get the base of the cutting calloused during the winter, and ready to put out roots in the spring, while the top bud will be held back from starting till they are planted in the spring. Early in spring take up the cuttings and set them in the proper position in rows for cultivation during the sumin rows for cultivation during the summer. Set them deep enough to cover the two lower buds, and have the top bud just above the ground. Each of the lower buds will put out roots, making two tiers of roots. These young vines can be taken up in the fall and planted in their permanent place. In planting them, shorten back the upper tier of roots to about three inches, and the lower tier to about six inches and set deep enough to cover both sets of roots as before. Cut the tops back to three eyes, and the first season let only one shoot grow, so as to make as strong a cane as possible, and the subsequent training can be done on any one of the many systems in use. For home use I prefer to grow all grapes on an overhead arbor. I have found that they are far less liable to rot, even and set them in the proper position the fertilizers lack.

Grants Writ of Error in Suit Against Street Car Company.

JURY GAVE WOMAN $2,000

Appeal Taken by Road, Which Claims That It Was Not at Fault.

"I am told that Canada peas sown in Virginia in January will make an ex- II.

A writ of error and supersedeas was granted by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia yesterday in the case of the Virginia Railway and Power Company against Mrs. L. O. Godsey. Bond in the sum of $2,500 was required. The case came to the Court of Appeals from the Hustings Court, Part II, of Richmond, in which Mrs. Godsey was given a verdict of $2,000 damages against the street railway company for personal injuries.

From the record it appears that on July 10, 1912, Mrs. Godsey, with her husband and daughter, Mrs. F. V. Augst, who live at 1514 North Twenty-second Street, in Fairmount, went on an excursion to Ocean View with the Fairmount Methodist Sunday school. Returning to Main Street Station late at night, the party boarded an Oakwood and Main Street car, securing transfers to the Fairmount line at Twenty-third and Venable Streets. It is stated that the Fairmount line is a single track affair, on which were operated small, single-truck closed cars, utterly incapable of carrying a whole Sunday school excursion at one trip.

Had 106 People on Car.

There was a large crowd waiting when the Fairmount car came along, it seats a maximum of twenty-eight people—had some fifteen or twenty already on board, and the conductor registered 406 fares, showing that between eighty and ninety people boarded the car at that point. The car was extremely crowded, according to the evidence, with people standing on the platforms and steps.

Mrs. Godsey approacheu the front step of the car on the left side, and got on the step, but no further, because of the crowd. The car started off, and while it was crossing Venable Street, she fell and was injured.

She testified that after the car started, two men got on the car while it was moving, pushing by her, and that that was why she fell. "They pushed up beside me and broke my hand-

The motorman came back and took her name am added that she was not, and walked to her home, five or six blocks away. She was bruised, and five days later sent for a doctor.

If there is a sod on the land where the early Irish potatoes are to be planted, it will be well to plow it at the first opportunity, so that the soil will be somewhat decayed by planting time. I never use stable manure on Irish potatoes, but always a fertilizer strong in phosphoric acid and potash. About 3 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid and 10 per cent potash will make potatoes, if used at rate of 1.000 pounds an acre. Late February or early March will be the best time in this climate for planting Irish potatoes.

Spinach, wintering over for spring cutting, will be greatly helped by a mulch of coarse manure now, and the onions planted in the fall will be all the better for a similar mulch.
